The Indianapolis Home Show comes to the Fairgrounds

Letter from our Director hat an exciting time this is, as we approach a new year with anticipation for the future!

With a chill in the air, there is excitement at the Indiana State Fairgrounds this winter as some of the largest consumer shows in the state open their doors all over our campus. January gets rolling with the Naptown Roller Derby, followed by huge shows such as the Indianapolis Home Show, the Boat, Sport & Travel Show in February and the Indianapolis Arts & Antique Show presented by Methodist Hospital in March. The Indiana State Fair Commission staff is not left idle after a fabulous State Fair and busy fall season, that's for sure!

While we are busy hosting these shows, the ice skating season continues as well. Between our public skating, youth hockey program and the Indiana Ice in the Pepsi Coliseum there truly is never a dull moment. I hope you all bring your families to this great facility to have fun and create new experiences each time.

We are all also looking forward to the 2009 Indiana State Fair. With the expanded dates adding five days to the event, a flurry of planning is well underway. Not only will more of the Indiana 4-H program be included in the Fair dates, these families will be able to have the full experience of the State Fair while they are competing for the top prizes.

In November, I had the privilege of representing the United States in New Zealand at an international conference, the Royal Agricultural Society of the Commonwealth. Our industry association, the International Association of Fairs and Expos (IAFE), was able to send a few board members to present a white paper on the challenges facing state fairs in the U.S. and to learn how other countries present agriculture to their communities. It was exciting to witness the respect IAFE has all over the world due to member fairs which continue to be a vital part of the communities. This was truly an amazing experience!

I invite you to keep abreast of all the activities at your Indiana State Fairgrounds by logging onto www.indianastatefair.com . There you will be able to keep updated on all year-round activities and plans for the 2009 Indiana State Fair!

AUGUST 7-23 · 2009 INDIANA **** ****

By Andy Klotz

hat are red, round and preferred by more people around the world than any other fruit? If you guessed tomatoes, give yourself a gold star.

Or maybe a Red Gold star.

For the third consecutive year, the Indiana State Fair is showcasing one state agricultural product, and in 2009 the fair is teaming up with Red Gold to make this the "Year of the Tomato."

That means fairgoers can expect to "ketchup" on the importance of this popular crop to the state's economy. They will learn fun facts like:

Indiana ranks 3rd in the United States in the production of tomatoes for processing. More than 10,000 acres of Hoosier tomatoes were planted in 2007.

Approximately 80 percent of Indiana's tomatoes went into high value products, meaning whole tomatoes, diced tomatoes or salsa. The remaining 20 percent were used in soft value products like ketchup, sauces and juice.

Indiana tomatoes can be harvested as early as May and as late as October.

Visitors will also find out why it's a good idea to make tomatoes a regular part of their diets. They will discover that tomatoes are:

Cholesterol-free

A great source of Vitamin C, Vitamin A and Vitamin E

Rich in potassium and fiber
An excellent source of lycopene, a powerful antioxidant proven to help prevent many different types of cancer

Red Gold, headquartered north of Indianapolis in Orestes, has been producing and distributing tomatoes and tomato products since 1942 when the company's founder, Grover Hutcherson, began canning tomatoes with his daughter to aid the war effort. The company's partnership with the fair will enable fair visitors to not only learn more about our favorite fruit, but to enjoy it in other unique ways, too. Special programming and events may include:

"Canstruction" contest where teams of architecture and engineering firms use cans to build giant structures with the cans of food later donated to Gleaners Food Bank

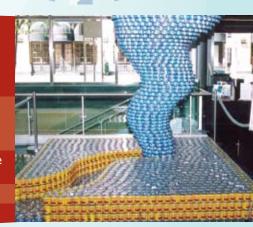

The Gazebo Gift Shop presented by Red Gold and decorated to represent Indiana tomatoes

Tomato-based Indiana State Fair signature foods

Tomato food cooking contest Celebrity Tomato Toss contest

So it doesn't matter whether you say it "to-may-to" or "to-mah-to." Just plan on enjoying this important piece of Indiana agriculture at this year's Indiana State Fair, August 7 – 23.

Above: "Canstruction" is just one of the unique exhibits you can expect to see at the 2009 Indiana State Fair.

Itimately, the Great Indiana State Fair is about people. Below the surface of cornmeal batter and fried dough, one finds countless families sharing time; youth proudly sharing the results of their hard labor; and selfless volunteers donating their time and passion to help provide extraordinary experiences in agriculture.

Sadly, one of our youngest and brightest smiling volunteers left us just before this year's fair. Naomi Ann Smith was killed in an auto accident on July 25, 2008.

Ever since she was a small girl, Naomi helped her grandfather, Walter Geisking, and many others in Pioneer Village every year. She would spend time working where needed, whether cooking in the summer kitchen or loading wagons. Regardless of where she worked, she took great delight in working with children and they, in turn, took great delight in working with her. Perhaps it was her twinkling eyes that broadcast a kind-hearted, barefoot irreverence and always joyful demeanor. It was of no surprise to anyone who knew her that she chose to be a teacher.

In honor of Naomi's love of agriculture, the Indiana State Fair, and education, the Naomi Ann Smith Memorial Fund has been created to allow disadvantaged school children to attend education programming at the State's Largest Classroom. Through the Naomi Ann Smith Memorial Fund, we can not only honor Naomi's love for teaching, we can ensure that young Hoosiers have an opportunity to learn about Indiana's abundant agricultural history and signifiall programming for the Education Department's State's Largest Classroom proved successful. The fairgrounds was abuzz with students, hayrides, and farm animals. In an attempt to gain a fresh perspective on autumn's educational triumphs, I sat down with Sassy, the Jersey heifer who resided on the north side throughout the duration of State's Largest Classroom programming, to pose a few questions about her thoughts on the fall.

Claire: Sassy, would you say the students had an enjoyable time at the fairgrounds this past semester?

Sassy: Oh, goodness, yes! My, there were over 3,000 students who moooved through the barn this fall! We enjoyed near-perfect weather for all five weeks!

Claire: Three-thousand?! That's amazing! Were there any highlights for you?

Sassy: Of course! The Hoosier Heritage Days Festival saw record attendance. Now, I'm not the smartest cow in the barn, but my calculations tell me that there were 1,700 school children here for the week of the festival!

Claire: Did you get along with the other animals?
Sassy: Well, let me tell you, it was a bit like a zoo at times. Considering this farm was full of goats, sheep, miniature horses, chickens, hogs, cows, and a Belgian horse, I think we all worked together very well! The children had a wonderful time; that's the moooost important part!

Claire: Any final thoughts on the State's Largest Classroom? Sassy: I would like to take this opportunity to thank Mr. Gordon Woods and Mr. Walter Geisking for all of their help in taking care of me and my farm friends. I had a lovely time. Thanks to all who attended the State's Largest Classroooom!

Disclaimer: No cows were actually interviewed during this process. Cows can't talk.

SLC on ICE

The Education Department is excited to announce a new program at the State's Largest Classroom - Ice Skating: A Classroom Adventure. Students can come and experience life on the ice at the Pepsi Coliseum's ice rink, home of the Indiana Ice hockey team! Here, students will have a unique physical education experience, but that's not all. School ice skating program dates are February 9-13.

he landscape of the north side of the fairgrounds is constantly changing, thanks to the young men and women of the FFA.

During the 2007 National FFA Convention, 100 FFA delegates put civic learning and leadership into action while helping construct the 1,700 square-foot state-of-the-art greenhouse next to the Normandy Barn.

This year, the delegates tackled the area between the greenhouse and the barn for their annual Day of Service. Over the course of three days in October, approximately 130 youth constructed nine raised demonstration garden beds, which will be used as garden plots where Indiana agricultural products will be grown and showcased. They also built an irrigation system that will water the beds. To wrap up the project, the students, visiting from states including Arizona, Florida, California, Indiana, and Iowa, laid flooring in the greenhouse that their fellow delegates helped build the year before.

Special thanks to Dean Hill, Ball State University's School of Architecture, and the Indiana State Fair Commission Buildings and Grounds staff, including Rich Trombley, Kenny Moore, Jeffrey Tutson, Steve Sipe, and Jack Maddox.

wind turbine grant awarded

t the 2009 Indiana State Fair, you will notice a brand new structure dotting our landscape. In October, the Indiana State Fair Commission received an Alternative Power and Energy grant from the Office of Energy and Defense Development to purchase and install a 3K wind turbine and three solar paneled awnings. The installation should be complete by May of this year.

hamburger and double-thick milkshakes. It brought in the older crowd with its steaks, hand-cut and aged in the restaurant's basement, and its famous beet-topped salad. Everyone saved room for strawberry pie.

During the 1950s and '60s, the Tee-Pee was the place to see and be seen. On any given Friday night, teenagers could be seen cruising by to watch the dating couples and to catch up on the latest gossip.

In the 1970s, the advent of fast food began a long, slow decline for the Tee-Pee. Unable to compete with the low prices and quick service of McDonalds, the Tee-Pee closed its doors for the last time in 1984.

The Indiana State Fair Board was unable to find anyone to lease and restore the building. A mere shadow of its former glory, the building was demolished in 1988. But memories of summer evenings filled with laughter and French fries continue to linger for Baby Boomers.

TEE PEE DRESSING

Source: WIBC 1070 What's cooking with Linda Lee

Makes 3 1/2 to 4 Gallons

GARLIC OIL:

3 whole bulbs (heads) garlic (separated into cloves and peeled)

1 gallon of salad oil

DRESSING:

14 oz. paprika

6 oz. season salt

4 oz. sugar

3 oz. salt

1 full mayonnaise recipe (recipe follows)

1 tube anchovy paste

10 oz. garlic oil

14 oz. wine vinegar

1 quarts water

Peel garlic and add to a gallon of salad oil. Let garlic soak (in refrigerator) overnight in the oil.

Stir together paprika, season salt, sugar, and salt.

To mayonnaise, stir in thoroughly dry mixture and tube of anchovy paste. Add 10 oz. of the garlic oil (refrigerate the remaining oil for other recipes) to the mixture.

Add vinegar and water; stir thoroughly. Refrigerate leftovers.

MAYONNAISE

Makes 3 gallons

13 oz. sugar

6 oz. salt

2 oz. dry mustard

1/2 oz. nutmeg

1/2 oz. ginger

1/2 oz. paprika

1/2 oz. white pepper

18 eggs

2 gallons salad oil

4 quarts water, divided

2 lbs. cornstarch

8oz. cider vinegar

Stir together sugar, salt, dry mustard, nutmeg, ginger, paprika, and white pepper; set aside.

Beat eggs well. With mixer on high speed, slowly add 2 gallons of oil.

Bring to a boil 3 quarts of water. Mix each pound of cornstarch with a 1/2 quart of water until smooth. This prevents the mixture from being lumpy. Add cornstarch and water mixture to boiling water, stirring constantly to keep smooth. Cook mixture until it is nice and thick.

Add hot cornstarch mixture to eggs and salad oil mixture. Stir well. Add dry mixture. Add vinegar and mix thoroughly.

Update

-airgrounds' Buildings Receive Improvements

hen it was built back in the early 1900s, the three-span 39th Street Bridge over Fall Creek was not only functional, but beautiful with its concrete arches and decorative stone. Slowly, the elements took their toll.

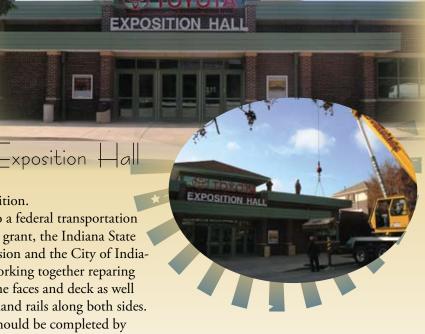

The bridge was closed to vehicular traffic in 1993, but still serves as a gateway for thousands of people each summer who cross the bridge on foot to go from the WFMS FairTrain into the Indiana State Fair. Now the bridge is receiving a renovation to restore it to its original condition.

Thanks to a federal transportation enhancement grant, the Indiana State Fair Commission and the City of Indianapolis are working together reparing the piers, stone faces and deck as well as installing hand rails along both sides. The project should be completed by spring.

There are also improvements going on inside the fairgrounds as well. The Toyota Expo Hall has received a completely new roof for the first time since 1993. The project included the relocation of all 10 of the building's HVAC units that will allow them to operate with greater efficiency and prevent leaks.

e could have been a lawyer.

Instead, Jeff Blashill, the general manager and head coach of the Indiana Ice, has his team off to a flying start three months into his rookie season with the club. The Ice are at the top of the United States Hockey League's East Division thanks to a balanced scoring attack and stellar goaltending by Brett Bennett.

A former goaltender himself, Blashill credits the hot start to great scouting and a supreme team work ethic.

"With so few returning players, it was hard to place expectations," he said. "Our guys practice hard and play hard. When you combine that approach with talent, you have a chance to be a very good team."

Blashill knows a thing or two about very good teams. The Sault Ste. Marie native spent the last six years as an assistant coach with the Miami Uni-

Redhawks, which made the NCAA tournament four of those seasons and won one Central Collegiate Hockey Association

versity (OH)

championship.

Prior to his stint with the Redhawks, Blashill spent four seasons as an assistant at his alma mater, Ferris State (MI). As a player in the USHL, he recorded a sparkling 43-11-0 record with the national champion Des Moines Buccaneers.

With all his early success, Blashill could be a rising star among hockey coaches, so it's hard to believe that he might not have ever given coaching a try had his college coach not asked him to be a volunteer assistant. As a three-time recipient of Ferris State's Scholar-Athlete award, he could have easily landed on Wall Street or in the courtroom.

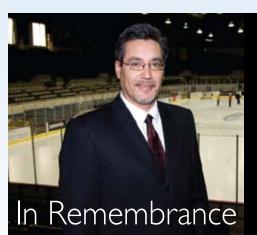

"I had strong thoughts of either getting into the financial world or going to Law School," he said. "I would still love to go to Law School."

Indiana Ice Coach Jeff Blashill

Odds of that happening continue to dwindle with each Ice victory. And that seems to be fine with him.

"I love to coach," he said.

Michael William Schupay, 1961-2008

The Indiana Ice continue to play well despite last month's tragic passing of Team President Michael W. Schupay. Schupay has been the guiding force behind the Ice organization.

"Mike was beloved by so many people in the local hockey fraternity, the USHL and all who had a working and personal relationship with him. We would like for everyone to please join us in saying a prayer for his beautiful wife Susan and their four sons, Cory, Michael Craig, Connor and Christian," said Ice Owner Paul Skjodt.

Indiana Ice players will be wearing black arm bands and a patch displaying the initials "MWS" on their jerseys for the remainder of the season.

By Angie Foreman and Ted Miller

n Saturday, January 24th from 3 to 7 p.m., the Fairgrounds will host the first ever Winter-Fest, a festival to celebrate the great microbrews of Indiana and beyond. I recently sat down with Mr. Ted Miller, President of the Brewers of Indiana Guild and a Brewer at Broad Ripple's Brugge Brasserie, to discuss the upcoming Festival.

Ted, aside from the obvious (sample great beer!), what can visitors expect at the first annual WinterFest?

"We're busy planning some entertainment and we will have a retail area where festgoers can get all sorts of brewery swag. We're also interested in arranging some educational beer/food pairing seminars during the fest itself. We are a bunch of brewers (and brewers are loads of fun), so there will certainly be games."

What types of beer will be featured at the Festival? Is the brew primarily locally-made craft microbrews or will you also feature beers from the larger brewpubs like the Rock Bottom or Ram, etc.?

"Everybody that brews beer in Indiana is a part of our guild regardless of ownership. I would imagine representation from all Indiana brewers. We also are inviting the distributors of local and out-of-state beers to participate. As far as types of beers, winterfests usually focus on the bigger "Winter Warmers." Beers are so seasonal you could almost have 4 fests a year. Hmm? Expect malty, robust barleywines and old ales as well as the brewers flagships."

The Great American Beer Festival took place in Colorado in October. Indiana swept the "Wood- and Barrel-aged Beer" category. Would you say Indiana has a growing reputation for producing excellent microbrews?

"I would absolutely say that. We have a dynamic group of young brewers in Indiana and the future looks bright. Indiana is a little behind many states as it relates to craft sales but most of us view that as one heck of an opportunity. I look forward to seeing Indiana's beer scene grow and prosper over the next few years."

The Indiana State Fair organizes an annual Brewers' Cup Competition. How would a homebrewer go about entering their own beer in the competition?

"Simply log-on to www.BrewersCup.org for detailed information on the competition. This year the guild is lending a bigger hand to the Cup in that our Executive Director, Penn Jensen, is graciously volunteering his time and skills. Our goal is to make this cup as much of a success as the "other" fermentables competition. Just kidding - although we do look to the wine competition for inspiration."
